Important information regarding the Programme Specification

Last revised 4 June 2019

The Programme Specification gives a broad outline of the structure and content of the programme, the entry level qualifications, as well as the learning outcomes students will achieve as they progress. Some of the information referred to in this programme specification is included in more detail on the University of London website. Where this is the case, links to the relevant webpage are included.

Where links to external organisations are provided, the University of London is not responsible for their content and does not recommend nor necessarily agree with opinions expressed and services provided at those sites.

If you have a query about any of the programme information provided, whether here or on the website, registered students should use the ask a question tab in the Student Portal; otherwise the Contact Us button at the bottom of every webpage should be used.

Terminology

The following language is specific to the Human Rights programme:

Core module: a compulsory module that must be taken.

Elective module: a module that is chosen from a number of options.

Dissertation module: a compulsory module that must be taken to complete the Master’s degree.

Key revisions made

Programme Specifications are revised annually. The quality committee of the School of Advanced Study, as part of its annual review of standards, confirms the programme structure and the educational aims and learning outcomes, and advises on any development in student support.

Significant changes made to the programme specification 2019–2020

Individual modules are now available to study on a stand-alone basis.

A new participation-based E-tivity has been introduced.

The use of ‘session’ and ‘study session’ has replaced ‘term’ throughout.

Exit awards are now known as exit qualifications.
Programme title and awards

Postgraduate Degrees of the University of London may be classified. The award certificate will indicate the level of the academic performance achieved by classifying the award. The classification of the degree will be based on the ratified marks from the completed assessments.

The classification system for this programme is as follows:

Distinction; Merit; Pass

Specific rules for the classification of awards are given in the Programme Regulations under Scheme of Award.

Programme name

Human Rights

Qualifications

- Master of Arts in Human Rights
- Postgraduate Diploma in Human Rights
- Postgraduate Certificate in Human Rights

If you registered prior to 1 October 2018, you may choose to be awarded:

- Master of Arts in Understanding and Securing Human Rights
- Postgraduate Diploma in Understanding and Securing Human Rights
- Postgraduate Certificate in Understanding and Securing Human Rights

(Contact us using the ‘ask a question’ tab in the Student Portal homepage)

Intermediate qualifications

The intermediate qualifications for this programme are the Postgraduate Certificate and Postgraduate Diploma as listed above. Upon successful completion, students will receive the intermediate qualification for which they are registered and may apply to continue to a higher qualification. However, they may not request a lower qualification than that which they are registered on, unless as an exit qualification. The specific rules are given in the Programme Regulations under Scheme of Award.

Exit qualifications

- Postgraduate Diploma in Human Rights
- Postgraduate Certificate in Human Rights

An exit qualification is an intermediate qualification, as noted above, for which the student may not have registered at the outset but which may be awarded on completion of specific modules (or credit accumulated) in a longer programme of study, if the student leaves the programme.
Exit qualifications are awarded at the discretion of the Board of Examiners and once a student has accepted an exit qualification they will not normally be permitted to continue their study of the same award with the University of London.

Individual modules

All of the modules from the MA, with the exception of the Dissertation (UHM500), may be taken on a stand alone basis as Individual modules.

Award titles may be abbreviated as follows:

- Master of Arts – MA
- Postgraduate Diploma – PGDip
- Postgraduate Certificate – PGCert

Level of the programme

The qualifications are placed at the following Levels of the Framework for Higher Education Qualifications (FHEQ):

- MA Level 7
- PGDip Level 7
- PGCert Level 7

Individual modules are offered at Level 7.

QAA subject benchmarks group

See the QAA website for information:

The QAA has not published a postgraduate subject benchmark statement for Human Rights.

Programme structures
The MA in Human Rights consists of three compulsory core modules, three elective modules and a dissertation module.

The PGDip in Human Rights consists of three compulsory core modules and three elective modules.

The PGCert in Human Rights consists of three compulsory core modules.

All modules except for the Dissertation (UHM500) are available to be studied on an individual basis. The modules which can be studied individually are the same as for the MA.

Full details of the Scheme of Award are included in the Programme Regulations.

Maximum and minimum periods of registration
The maximum and minimum periods of registration, from a student's effective date of registration, are:

Credit value of modules

Further information about the credit systems used by universities in the UK and Europe is provided by the Quality Assurance Agency and the European Credit Transfer and Accumulation System.

Where credits are assigned to modules of a programme, credit indicates the amount of learning carried out in terms of the notional number of study hours needed, and the specified Frameworks for Higher Education Qualifications of UK Degree-awarding Bodies (FHEQ) credit level indicates the depth, complexity and intellectual demand of learning involved. The details below indicate the UK credits and the European Credit Transfer and Accumulation System (ECTS) values.
For the Human Rights programme, credits are assigned to the modules as follows:

- 20 UK credits or 10 ECTS credits for all core and elective modules;
- 60 UK credits or 30 ECTS credits for the dissertation module.

Each award comprises the following number of credits:

- MA degree: 180 UK credits or 90 ECTS credits;
- PGDip: 120 UK credits or 60 ECTS credits;
- PGCert: 60 UK credits or 30 ECTS credits.

One UK credit equates to a notional ten hours of study.

Recognition of prior learning

Recognition of prior learning is a generic term for the process by which we recognise and, where appropriate, award credit for learning that has taken place elsewhere, before entry onto this programme of study.

Where the prior learning covered a similar syllabus to a module/course studied elsewhere, credit will be awarded as if you took the University of London module.

See the General Regulations (Section 3) for more rules relating to prior learning.

This programme will not recognise or accredit prior learning but will consider credit transfer from member institutions of the University of London.

Entrance requirements

Postgraduate entrance requirements

All entrance requirements for the Human Rights programme are set out on the programme page under the Requirements tab.

Applicants must submit an application in line with the procedures and deadlines set out on the website.

English language requirements

All applicants must satisfy the English language requirements for the programme. These are set out in detail on the programme page under the Requirements tab.

Where an applicant does not meet the prescribed English language proficiency requirements but believes that they can demonstrate the requisite proficiency for admission the University may, at its discretion, consider the application.

Internet access and computer specification

Students will require regular access to a computer with an internet connection to use the University of London’s online resources and systems.
The computer should have at least the following minimum specification:

- a web browser (the latest version of Firefox, Chrome or Internet Explorer) which must accept cookies and have JavaScript enabled;
- a good internet connection;
- screen resolution of 1024 x 768 or greater;
- sufficient bandwidth to download documents of at least 2 MB.

and the following applications installed:

- a word processor that reads Microsoft Word format (.doc);
- Adobe, or other pdf reader.

Certain modules may have additional requirements, such as:

- Microphone and speakers;
- software to manage spreadsheets and run macros;
- software for playing mp3 and mp4 files.

Students with access requirements

The University of London welcomes applications from disabled students and/or those who have access requirements. The University will make every effort to provide reasonable adjustments to enable those with a disability, learning difficulty or access requirements to have the same opportunity as all other students to successfully complete their studies.

The University is committed to managing the application procedure and the programme itself to ensure that services are accessible for all students and that an inclusive environment is created. Students with a disability, or others who may need access arrangements to assist in taking examinations, should complete the relevant section of the application form, or contact the Inclusive Practice Manager. A separate room or other arrangements may be considered.

Requests are considered by a University panel, whose purpose is to ensure that students with disabilities and/or specific access requirements are neither advantaged nor disadvantaged by such arrangements when compared with other students. These considerations remain separate from the academic selection processes.

For further information, see Inclusive Practice Policy.

Sources of funding and scholarships

Information about potential sources of funding and scholarships is updated annually and where available is included in the prospectus web pages.

For further information see www.london.ac.uk/applications/funding-your-study.

Educational aims and learning outcomes of the programmes

Educational aims

The MA in Human Rights aims to enable students to develop an understanding of human rights theories and the legal frameworks which support national and international human rights systems. The MA also aims to support students in acquiring practical skills which will enable them to work in the field of human rights.
The compulsory core modules of the MA in Human Rights aim to prepare students to:

- Develop nuanced and comprehensive understanding of human rights perspectives, contexts and organisations;
- Analyse, evaluate and apply this knowledge to different cases and practices;
- Develop independent critical and evaluative skills, enabling them to compare and analyse human rights practices across different cultures and states while recognising variations of interpretation and practice in different regions of the world;
- Be able to work effectively within existing human rights frameworks to protect, promote and implement human rights;
- Understand the challenges of human rights protection, promotion and implementation in a changing global context;
- Take up careers in human rights work or enhance existing human rights careers in a variety of contexts, including civil society organisations, governments, non-governmental organisations, the public sector, and businesses.

The elective modules aim to prepare students to:

- Expand and deepen their knowledge of specialist topics within the broad field of human rights;
- Be able to independently develop programmes of action and policies as appropriate to different case studies;
- Take up careers in thematically specialised areas of human rights work or enhance existing human rights careers in a variety of contexts, including civil society organisations, governments, non-governmental organisations, the public sector, and businesses.

The dissertation module aims to prepare students to:

- Develop and apply knowledge of human rights theory, practice and methodologies towards a research question;
- Design and carry out a complex research project;
- Develop an original argument based on independently gathered evidence, contributing to the development of the field of human rights.

Learning outcomes

Knowledge and understanding

MA, PGDip and PGCert students will, upon completion of the compulsory core modules, be able to:

- Describe, assess and critique introductory and advanced concepts, theories and debates in the field of human rights, including across a range of humanities and social science disciplines which have contributed to cross-cultural understandings of human rights;
Programme Specification 2019–2020 Human Rights
(MA/PGDip/PGCert/Individual modules)

- Expand and build upon introductory and advanced concepts, theories and debates in the field of human rights.

Intellectual and cognitive

MA, PGDip and PGCert students will, upon completion of the compulsory core modules, be able to:

- Explain, analyse and critique foundational and complex human rights concepts, standards and mechanisms;
- Compare and evaluate cross-cultural human rights theories, approaches, and practices;
- Understand, evaluate and compare multi-disciplinary and interdisciplinary approaches to human rights theory and practice.

Transferable skills

MA, PGDip and PGCert students will, upon completion of the compulsory core modules, be able to:

- Develop analytical, legal and policy writing skills by producing a range of assessed pieces of written work according to the guidelines produced for each one;
- Develop reasoning and logic to be able to put together a complex and sustained argument pertaining to topics within human rights;
- Manage their own learning, including working effectively to deadlines; planning; and organising tasks.

MA and PGDip students who have completed three elective modules will be able to:

Knowledge and understanding:

- Understand historical and contemporary violation, defence and securing of individual and group human rights in an international and cross-cultural context;
- Acquire and demonstrate understanding of specialist and advanced theoretical and practical knowledge of particular areas of human rights theory and practice.

Intellectual and cognitive:

- Critically evaluate theoretical concepts pertaining to the violation, defence and securing of human rights, with reference to historical situations and contemporary case studies.
- Apply empirical evidence from contemporary and historical situations to theoretical and philosophical human rights frameworks.

Transferable skills:

- Develop advanced and specialist writing skills in particular applied areas of human rights through the completion of specialist assessed pieces of written work.
MA students who have completed the dissertation module will be able to:

Knowledge and understanding:

- Develop a nuanced understanding of research methodologies used across the humanities and social sciences;
- Appreciate, understand and evaluate how these methods can be used specifically to pursue human rights research;
- Develop a nuanced understanding of research methodologies established specifically for researching human rights questions.

Intellectual and cognitive:

- Critically evaluate a range of multi-disciplinary approaches to and methodologies of research, applying them as appropriate to their own original research project;
- Critically evaluate their own work, including assessing the approaches and methodologies used.

Transferable skills:

- Plan and complete a complex independent research project;
- Develop creative and comprehensive ways of thinking and approaching research questions.

Learning, teaching and assessment strategies

Students learn on this programme by engaging with academically rigorous and up-to-date learning materials and resources. For each module, students will be provided with access through the University of London’s Online Library to all required reading materials from a range of appropriate sources, as well as having access to the relevant journals and academic databases subscribed to by the University.

This programme uses a Virtual Learning Environment (VLE) to enable students to access learning materials and knowledge sources; interact with their fellow students; use knowledge and skills in online tasks; complete assessments and receive feedback from their tutors.

The Programme Director is the main point of contact between the School of Advanced Study and the students, and is available to assist students with any questions that they may have about the academic content of the programme. The Student Administrator is also available to answer questions about the administrative aspects of students’ studies. A technical team may be called upon to help with any difficulties in accessing the VLE. A key component of the student experience is peer-to-peer learning, and so students are enrolled in relevant discussion forums throughout each module on the programme.

Each module on the programme includes online assessments (E-tivities), which take the form of written work prepared in response to a task or tasks specified by the Programme Director. The E-tivities provide formative and summative feedback to the students as a means of monitoring their progress and identifying areas in which they can improve.

Timely and concise feedback for each E-tivity is provided by either the Module Convenor or the assigned Associate Tutor, as appropriate.
Core modules are assessed by three E-tivities and either the submission of coursework or a written examination accounting for 70% of the module mark. The E-tivities collectively account for 30% of the module mark.

E-tivities, along with the final assessment for each module, serve to counter plagiarism in addition to providing pedagogic merit. The final assessment for each module (examination or coursework) allows students to demonstrate that they have acquired appropriate understanding, the ability to analyse a range of materials and incorporate feedback. Students receive feedback on examined work, assessed E-tivities and written coursework. Students must also undertake a dissertation that relates to human rights. This enables the student to develop and demonstrate their capacity to carry out a substantial piece of independent academic research on a selected topic.

Students are assessed on their capacity to define a topic, to articulate a coherent scheme for examining the topic, to gather necessary data and to analyse and present this data in a way that satisfactorily analyses the topic and makes an original contribution to the field of human rights, whether theoretical, empirical or policy-orientated. The dissertation is assessed by the submission of a research proposal (15%), as well as the final dissertation itself (85%).

Assessment criteria for the programme take into account the level at which these skills have been achieved.

Assessment methods

Each core module will be assessed by a combination of summative E-tivities (30%) and coursework or a written examination (70%). Each elective module will be assessed by a combination of summative E-tivities (30%) and one item of coursework (70%). The assessments are designed to assess students’ academic skills – for example their analytical capacities will be assessed through traditional essays. However, the MA also makes use of innovative forms of assessment which are designed to test students’ capacities as human rights practitioners by reflecting the kinds of activities and tasks they might be expected to do as human rights practitioners.

The dissertation is assessed through a dissertation proposal (15%) and dissertation thesis (85%).

E-tivities are designed to encourage engagement and enjoyment of the programme among peers. Timely and concise feedback is critical to student engagement in distance learning, and is provided for each E-tivity.

For further information on assessment and the scheme of award, please see the Programme Regulations and Programme Handbook.

Each module runs for a 14-week study session that begins in either September or February with final assessments in late January or late May respectively. Towards the end of each session there will be a dedicated revision period of two weeks followed by the final assessment.

Two of the core modules, both of which run in the September or February sessions, have written examinations in late January (for the September session) or late May/early June (for the February session) with the possibility of retake in the next exam session.

These written examinations are held at established centres worldwide.
Individual modules
A student may choose whether or not to be formally assessed in the credit bearing individual modules for which they are registered. Students who choose to be formally assessed will be examined in the same way as for the MA.

Full details of the dates of all examinations are available on the website.

Student support and guidance
The following summarises the support and guidance available to students:

- Student Guide: This provides information which is common to all students and gives guidance on a range of matters from the start of a student’s relationship with the University of London through to their graduation.

- The Virtual Learning Environment (VLE): This gives access to study materials including lessons, activities and assignments for each module studied.

- The VLE also includes a range of additional study resources such as:
  - Online student café and discussion areas which allow students to communicate with each other.
  - Past examination papers and Examiners’ commentaries: these provide generic feedback from assessment and will be available to students after the first examination session.
  - Employability skills module: This provides guidance to students on how to manage their career in the future, available through the VLE.

- Programme Handbook: This tells students how to access available resources and assessment and examinations procedures.

- Module subject guides for each module studied; these introduce and develop the topics, and include recommended reading lists.

- Programme Regulations: These are the rules that govern a student’s registration with the University.

- The Online Library This provides a range of full-text, multidisciplinary databases where journal articles, e-books and reports can be found.

- University of London library: Registered students may use the resources located within the Senate House library.

- A University of London email account and web area for personal information management.
Quality evaluation and enhancement

The University of London delivers the majority of its flexible and distance learning programmes through a collaboration between the University of London Worldwide and member institutions of the University of London. However some of the flexible and distance learning programmes draw solely on academic input from the University of London, and are delivered without academic lead by a member institution. The policies, partnerships (where applicable) and quality assurance mechanisms applicable for the programmes are defined in the following key documents: The Quality Framework, the Quality Assurance Schedules, Guidelines for Examinations, General Regulations and, for each programme, programme-specific regulations.

Awards standards

All University of London qualifications have to align with the Frameworks for Higher Education Qualifications of UK Degree-Awarding Bodies to assure appropriate standards for each qualification. In addition, every programme that is developed by a member institution of the University of London (or a consortium with representation by more than one member institution) will be developed to the same standard as would be applied within the institution concerned. Proportionate and robust approval procedures, including external scrutiny and student engagement are in place for all programmes. Learning materials are written and all assessments are set and marked by academic staff who are required to apply the University’s academic standards.

Review and evaluation mechanisms

Some of the key mechanisms in place to assure the standards of all University of London qualifications and the quality of the student experience include:

- Annual programme reports: produced for all programmes in order to review and enhance the provision and to plan ahead;
- Independent external examiners: submit reports every year to confirm that a programme has been assessed properly and meets the appropriate academic standards;
- Annual student information statistics: prepared for all systematic reporting within the University of London;
- Periodic programme reviews: carried out every 4–6 years to review how a programme has developed over time and to make sure that it remains current and up-to-date.

Student feedback mechanisms

The Student Experience Survey, carried out every two years, collects feedback from the student body on a range of topics relating to the student lifecycle. The results are considered in a number of different ways, including by the Pro-Vice Chancellor, the programme team, principal committees and departments at the University of London responsible for different aspects of the student experience. Once the findings have been considered in detail, responses are published from both the University of London and from the individual Programme Directors.

Additional survey activity may also be conducted from time to time through the student portal, by email or from the programme team.
VLEs also provide the opportunity for informal feedback and discussion.

An undergraduate and postgraduate student member is appointed by the University to the majority of committees through an annual appointment round. Some programmes also recruit student members at the programme level. Students are frequently invited to take part in quality review processes such as Periodic Programme Reviews, Programme approval, Thematic Reviews, MOOC review panels and ad hoc focus groups. Opportunities such as these are advertised through social media and on the website. More information can be found on the website.

After graduation

Further study

Successful completion of the programme can allow students to progress to a higher level award in the subject area.

Graduate employment routes

This degree is particularly suitable for individuals who seek to become human rights practitioners in the NGO, business, governmental, and inter-governmental sectors. It is also suitable for those currently working in the field of human rights who wish to develop their careers by enhancing their theoretical, practical, and policy understanding of human rights.

This MA prioritises practice as well as theoretical knowledge and understanding. Our aim is to equip students with the practical skills essential to working in the field of human rights, including advocacy, research, legal analysis and fundraising, thus enabling graduates to establish, or advance, their career in human rights. The emphasis on practical as well as scholarly approaches to human rights provides graduates with a skill-set which makes them highly employable. Graduates can also proceed to further study through research degrees, building on their acquired skills in research methods and analysis.

Potential employers include international intergovernmental organisations, such as the UN Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights; and non-governmental organisations, such as Amnesty International, Anti-Slavery International, and the International Red Cross; or local or regional organisations dedicated to advocacy and defending human rights, such as The Children’s Society (UK) and businesses with an ethical trade or corporate social responsibility division.

The Alumni Network

Upon graduation, students automatically become members of the University of London Alumni Network, a diverse worldwide community of alumni in more than 180 countries. The Alumni Network can provide past students with lifelong links to the University of London and each other. Benefits include social and networking events, access to local groups, a bi-annual magazine, social networking groups, and the opportunity to become an Alumni Ambassador for the University of London.
